A Massachusetts limousine driver was booked for DUI when taking a group of kids to the Lowell Catholic High School prom. He has been reported by the students that they think he had been drinking. He was then arrested by local law enforcement.

Lowell police mention that 45-year-old Brian Harrison of Tewksbury, Mass., has been charged late Friday with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence.

Police state that two female students that Harrison picked up believed he may have been drinking. One of the girls used her cell phone to call a parent, who then called the Lowell police dept.

Harrison was released on bail and will be arraigned Monday in Lowell District Court
